JAMES W. SCOTT DIED SUDDENLY YESTERDAY

Widely Known Janesville Real Estate Dealer Was Stricken With Heart Failure Last Evening.

Suddenly stricken with heart failure, after an illness of only a day, James W. Scott, one of the best known dealers in real estate and former alderman, died last night at his home, 814 bluff street. Mr. Scott was at his office on Saturday in usual good health and spirits. He retired that evening as usual and passed Sunday without complaining of any weakness or ill health. Yesterday morning he awoke feeling very weak and decided to remain at home until he grew stronger. Dr. Guy McWhinnie was called to attend him and found that he was suffering from acute dilation of the heart. Mr. Scott was given treatment and all through the day showed no signs of failing. On going to the bathroom at eight o'clock he collapsed and fell to the floor. Dr. McWhinnie was again called in, but Mr. Scott's condition failed to respond to treatment. His heart action became more violent and his strength and vitality ebbed away until one o'clock when he passed away.

Widespread sorrow and great surprise was occasioned by the news of Mr. Scott's death. His equals among his friends in the business world were very large, his business being in Janesville and in the surrounding country. For a long time he conducted a real estate and insurance business with W. F. Sherman under the firm name of Scott and Sherman, later being in business alone. Earlier in his career he was associated with H. E. Ransom in the drug business. He was an officer and active member of the Rock County-Caledonia society and also a member of the Moose Order. For several years he was an alderman from the second ward, elected on the republican ticket, retiring last spring.

James W. Scott was born April 11, 1867. He was married April 8, 1891, to Ida H. Dowling, who with his father, one brother, and four sisters survive him. His father, Robert Scott, who, for over thirty years, was sexton at Oak Hill cemetery, was his brother, Walter, and two sisters, Miss Lucille Scott and Mrs. Marion Fuller, live in Payson, Washington. One sister, Mrs. Della Pierce, resides in Seattle and another, Mrs. Gertrude Jacobs in Vancouver, B. C. Mrs. William Goodwin, his aunt lives on Terrace street in this city, and an aunt and two cousins live in Chicago.

Mrs. Ann Brazzel, widow of Kearn Brazzel, who died (1911) this city thirteen years ago, passed away last evening at her home 721 North Milwaukee street. She had been ill for a long time. Mrs. Brazzel was eighty-one years old and had lived in Janesville for fifty-five years. She retained her faculties well and her kindly disposition won her many friends among the younger generation as well as among the gradually passing old.

Mrs. Brazzel was born in Ireland in 1830 and emigrated to the United States with her parents when very young. She was married to Kearn Brazzel in Hartford, Conn., and made her home in that city until coming to Janesville. Mourning her demise are three children, W. H. Brazzel, and P. J. Brazzel, and Miss Della Brazzel, all of Janesville.

Funeral services will be held at nine o'clock Thursday morning in St. Patrick's church of which Mrs. Brazzel was a faithful member and supporter. Interment will be at Mount Olivet cemetery.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Schultz.

Tyrell took the lead at the start which he steadily kept in all but one lap before the final round. Clone made one attempt to set the pace but was easily passed and he dropped back into sec-

Harley Davidson who was master of ceremonies last night, gave an exhibition of fancy roller skating which was far superior to anything ever seen on the local floor. The feats he performed were nothing less than marvelous and he was greeted with enthusiastic applause. He concluded his performance with a jump over five chairs turning a complete circle in mid-air.

The music of the Power City band added dash and spirit to the races last evening, and they are engaged for the two remaining nights of the week for which the racers are engaged.

CARDINALS TO PLAY FOND DU LAC TEAM

Second Game for State Championship Will be Played With Company E Team at Fond du Lac.

Aspiration of the Janesville Cardinals for state championship honors will meet a real test in the game with the far-famed Company E team at Fond du Lac next Saturday evening. The military players have a record of victories behind them which allows them to enter the race for the championship without any question of a doubt. Practically every team in the state which they have met this season has been humbled before them. They were defeated by the New York Nationals, however, while the Cardinals were the winners in the game played with that team. This victory places the Janesville team in slightly the superior position with reference to the Company E team.

The Company E team won the first of a five game series with the Company I team of Neenah on the fortion, has been scheduled to meet the Cardinals sometime next week.

The Company E line-up is as follows: Fogarty and Lapine, forwards; Hawkins, center; Lupton and Longtin, guards. The Cardinals will play with their usual line-up.

COLUMBUS APPEARS TO PRACTICE DELAY

Are Not Anxious To Play Elimination Game With Janesville. According to Attitude.

Dilatatory tactics on the part of Columbus indicates that they are not anxious to play the elimination basketball game with Janesville as was arranged by the management of the Lawrence college tournament. This game was originally scheduled for Friday evening of this week, but Coach McMurray who phoned to the Columbus coach this morning learned that the latter's team had no intention of playing on that date. In fact, it was stated that they could not play this week or the first of next week and it was evident that they had made no arrangements toward playing the game at all.

Whether they are afraid of the Janesville team, or what their plans are, is something entirely unknown to the Janesville management. The Lawrence authorities will undoubtedly be asked to clear up the matter in the near future.

UNITED DOCTORS

UNITED DOCTORS PERFORM MIRACLES IN CURING MAN OF NINETEEN YEAR AILMENT.

Nearly half an average lifetime spent in misery is the terrible experience of Claus Carlson of 129 1/2 12th street, Racine, Wis. No one but Mr. Carlson himself can probably realize the suffering and misery of nineteen years of stomach trouble. The hardest part, perhaps of all, is to see healthy, happy people on all sides who seem not to know what sickness is. Mr. Carlson owes his present good health to the remarkable treatment of the United Doctors who have their Janesville Institute in the Hayes Bldg., corner of Milwaukee and Main Street. Mr. Carlson in mentioning his years of illness says as follows: "For nineteen years I have been in continual pain. Only a year ago last April I had a hemorrhage from my stomach. My pain had been so great I could not eat and was in as bad shape as a man could be and live. I thought myself far beyond the possibility of ever being cured—for nineteen years of misery is no light thing and one begins to think and wonder if he can again be normal and healthy like most other people—eat, drink and sleep as they do. I have tried almost every cure I ever heard of and innumerable doctors but my condition remained the same until I went to the United Doctors' Racine Institute on May 23, 1911. I went to them to give their new system of medicine a trial though I was in a very skeptical frame of mind. Now here is the part that will interest sick and ailing people: In three days' time I felt greatly improved and in one week I had no pain and could eat heartily. I wish that every man and woman who have lost hope of being cured could see this statement and understand what the United Doctors have done for me. I want this printed for I will know that I have in a small way helped to bring hope to others. I have no doubt whatever I will never have pains again. It is the turn of the tide and I no longer dread the future though I am now fifty years of age. I am married and I see a better, happier and healthier future ahead of me now than I have had before in nineteen years."

People often travel hundreds of miles to be treated by the United Doctors and their wonderful new system of treatment. They never see the knife or cut into the body. The United Doctors' Janesville Institute is in the Hayes Bldg. Many marvelous cures have been accomplished already in Janesville and the surrounding country by these specialists of almost every conceivable disease and ailment.

Menagerie of Insects.

A menagerie of insects will soon be installed in the Paris museum of natural history. Cages of glass, instead of steel, will be occupied by spiders, ants, bees, centipedes and beetles, instead of lions, tigers, wolves and hyenas. Then it will be possible for the public to study the lives of ants underground and of bees in their hives.

March 12, 1912.—The storm that was on the southern Plains yesterday has crossed the Mississippi valley and is now in the Ohio valley, whence its influence extends to the Gulf of Mexico on one side, and to the Lake Michigan on the other. This disturbance has been attended by heavy rainfalls on the Gulf coast, and in the southern Atlantic states. At New Orleans 2.50 inches fell in 24 hours, 1.64 at Montgomery, 1.10 at Jacksonville, and 1.08 at Charleston. Snow or rain fell in greater or less amount in nearly all of the states east of the Mississippi, and in the Missouri valley; and mid-day today. An area of high barometer, of no great extent or intensity follows this storm on the Northern Plains, and is attended by slightly lower temperatures. Another barometric depression has made its appearance off the California coast, and is attended by heavy rainfall at San Francisco.

In this vicinity the weather will be fair tonight and Wednesday.

THIEF ROUGH-HOUSES FLAT TO GET MONEY

Secures $84 in Rooms of Bachelor Maids After Turning Everything in the House Topsy-Turvy.

A daylight robbery was made yesterday afternoon in the flat over the vault market on West Milwaukee street, occupied by the Misses Jennie Schlietert, Alpha and Sadie Nering, and Miss Anna Dolan. The thief visited the rooms between noon and five o'clock when Miss Schlietert came home, and secured the sum of $84, belonging to Miss Schlietert and the Misses Nering. To secure this he had broken open two locked trunks and ransacked a bed. Fifteen dollars that Miss Dolan had hidden in a small hand bag escaped the thief's notice.

A thorough rough-housing had been done by the burglar. When the young ladies came home they found their drawers pulled out on the floor, beds that had been made torn open, clothing disturbed and thrown about and every nook showing signs of a thorough search. Nothing but the money was found missing.

HIBERNIANS PLAN TO CELEBRATE SUNDAY

Special Program Is Being Arranged For St. Patrick's Day at Myer's Theater.

Sunday being the 17th of March, the members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will commemorate St. Patrick's day with a fitting program at the Myer's Theater in the evening at which Rev. Father Reynolds of Chicago will deliver an address and a special musical program will be given. The members of the Order will assemble at the United Spanish War Veterans' hall Sunday morning in time to attend St. Patrick's church for early mass, at seven-thirty. Rev. Father Reynolds is one of the noted speakers of the Catholic ministry and his address will be a most interesting one.

EXPECTED TO FAVOR OPENING THEATRES

Recommendation That They Be Allowed to Operate on Sunday Will Probably Be Made to Council Tonight.

Recommendation that the theatres of the city be permitted to be open and operate during specified hours on Sunday is expected from the committee named to report on that proposition to the Common Council this evening. The members of the committee are Aldermen Connell, Dulin and Spohn, and were named by Mayor Nichols at the adjourned meeting of the council held last Friday evening. The Sunday opening proposal has aroused considerable discussion pro and con and it is probable that a number of citizens will desire to be heard before the council takes final action.

PIANO RECITAL ENDS APOLLO CLUB SEASON

Mrs. John Fuller Sweeney Delights Large Audience at Last Program of Most Successful Year.

One of the best and most successful seasons which the Apollo Club has enjoyed during the eight years of prosperity marking its history was fittingly brought to a delightful close last evening with the piano recital given by Mrs. John Fuller Sweeney at Library hall. Despite the fact that artists with country wide fame have been heard here during the past winter under the auspices of the Apollo Club its officers and members were well pleased to be able to arrange for a program by one of the members of the Club.

At the request of a number present Mrs. Sweeney prefaced each selection with a brief sketch of its form and general motif, leaving the interpretation of the stories told by the music to the imagination of the audience. Several of the pieces were of the sort which very few artists place upon a program inasmuch as they have not been tested for years before audiences of all countries. Schumann's Klondike, which is a collection of short pieces written for and of the children, proved to be one of the most pleasing numbers on the program both because of its newness in concert work and because of its simple beauty.

Mrs. Sweeney, who has studied with some of the greatest artists of the day both in this country and Europe, was at her best last evening and though she answered to but one encore the applause was most hearty and appreciative of her ability. Her interpretation of the selections of the well chosen program was truly artistic in every sense of the word. Her Schumann compositions with all their intricacy were tossed off with seeming ease and yet with delightful delicacy. Her playing not only showed the years of practice but was backed up by an intelligence which is so necessary to the true artist. Even the most difficult pieces were played with accuracy and correctness, the themes were brought with great clearness and yet in it all there was put feeling and expression which takes away the mechanical.

Altogether the entire program was one of the most pleasing which has been given this season and those who heard last evening's recital are proud to have such talent in the Apollo Club.

At the close of the program the two members of the board of trustees, whose terms expired with this year, C. P. Beers and Prof. E. S. Taylor, were re-elected for another term of office.

BANQUET IS GIVEN BY FORUM SOCIETY

Officers Entertain Members at Flynn's Restaurant Following Regular Program Last Night.

The weekly meetings of the boys' literary societies of the high school were held last evening and in both very interesting programs were given.

In the Forum the program was a great success, consisting of three numbers. The first number was a discussion by Roy Cannon of a selection from "A Submarine That Fires Its Hull." James Dixon gave an interesting account of "Life in the Camp," in which he told of the life and activities of the soldiers in Camp Douglas, where he served as target boy for the soldiers during maneuvers. The last number was a very interesting account of the "Costs of Baseball," given by Raymond Falter. Following this short program the Forum adjourned to Flynn's restaurant, where a banquet was given them by the Forum officers. After the banquet several toasts were given. First, a toast to the Forum's "Saturday Evening Post" was given by Fred Cummings and to the boys' literary societies was given by Roy Cannon. John Ferguson, given the officers of the Forum and Vice-president Hanson responded.

This statement was made by one of our enthusiastic owners last week in response to the question as to how he liked his car. Why do you say that? For the same reason that I enjoy life and accident insurance with a well-known, thoroughly responsible company. I feel and so did the company when they wrote my policy that I was as good physically as the average man and better than some as far as that is concerned, at the same time something might develop. I don't need it now while I am "running all right," but I might meet with an accident or contract some disease which would render me helpless. Then I would need their protection and I know I would get it.

Same is true of an automobile. An E-M-F "30" or Flanders "20" runs as nice as any of them, and while it is running, I naturally don't give a thought as to who is behind it but, something might develop. Never was a car built, regardless of price, that didn't at one time or another need some attention, but with my car these points don't bother me at all. My insurance is good and I know it, and when trouble develops I know where to go and further I know that my insurance will be paid in prompt, intelligent and cheerful service and without delay.

So when you buy your automobile use the same good judgment you do when you buy any staple article. Don't be satisfied with appearances from the outside. Get on the inside. Get down to facts and weigh them all. Look to the business side. In other words have the salesman meet you on your own ground, instead of leading you into mechanical fields where you are compelled to merely draw conclusions instead of considering facts from a business standpoint.

Do this and you will buy an E-M-F "30" or Flanders "20." There's only one answer.

HEART AND HOME TALKS BY BARBARA BOYD

The Business Girl Who "Fell Down."

It is rather rare for a business girl to acknowledge that she has taken a position that she cannot measure up to, to resign it, and to go cheerfully back to her former duties. That she can face the situation thus courageously and brightly speaks well for her character and her chances of future happiness. For most people under the circumstances would have held on until they were discharged, and then become bitter.

But a certain business girl was brave enough to take this rather unusual course. She was very ambitious, and by persistence, she fairly compelled the firm for whom she worked in one capacity to give her a higher position than was vacant. The firm was satisfied with the work she was doing, and several of the chiefs were doubtful of her ability to fill the higher position. But she was so anxious to have it, that they finally acceded and she was promoted.

She worked hard for a year. She faithfully did her best. But the more deeply she got into the new work, the more she realized it was beyond her. And when she had tried it long enough to be fully convinced, she went to the head, admitted her error, and asked for her old work back. She did it cheerfully, too. And she performed her old duties as carefully and thoroughly as ever. No doubt she had her own battle. But the best in her won out.

How many of us would have done it? With some, pride would have prevented. Or we would have hunted around for an excuse, and said we weren't getting a square deal. Or we would have worked along until we probably would have been discharged. And then, the face of life would have been changed, for us, for a while at least. We would have been bitter and pessimistic and said there was no use in trying to get ahead.

There is something to think about in this girl's action. It is well enough to be ambitious. We should always try to get ahead. And as a rule, the fact that we want to get ahead is indicative that we can. But when we do take a step in what seems a forward direction, if we discover that our judgment has been at fault, how much wiser to do as this girl did than to worry ourselves into illness over the way the work is going, or to make an open failure of it.

This girl did not quit because she was too lazy to do the added work that came to her, or because she wanted to shirk responsibility, but because she had to admit honestly to herself that she hadn't the ability. This did not mean that she hadn't ability in other lines, but simply that this was beyond her.

It isn't pleasant to go back. But sometimes, we do take the wrong turn. And it is better when we discover it to face about, than to go stubbornly forward until we are so far from the right course that it is impossible to return. This simply means a wreck by the roadside. Whereas, by getting back more into our right path we will go on to ultimate success, perhaps all the surer, because of our little excursion. For we know now that we are in our right work. And if we hadn't tried the other, we might always have been tortured by the longing for it, and so have given the work in hand but half-hearted attention. But having satisfied ourselves on this score, we can now turn with our whole heart to what we have to do, and so march forward to success; which after all is the goal with most of us, no matter what road we take.

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

If all the wise and clever sayings, all the successful solutions of vexed problems, all the admirable literary productions and brilliant plans and ideas which come to us in that beautiful borderland time between waking and sleeping, could only be remembered and utilized in all their pristine brilliancy the next morning, what a wonderful world of clever people this would be!

There is a certain question which I have never solved entirely to my satisfaction—perhaps you will be glad to know that questions really do exist which I do not feel competent to decide—and that is, whether all these thoughts really are so tremendously brilliant, and seem foolish the next morning only because we cannot fully recall them, or whether they really are foolish and seem brilliant only because they come to us when we are half asleep and not capable of judging clearly.

Personally, I am inclined to the latter rather pessimistic hypothesis, but I know many people who hold the former. One very persistent optimist, for instance, who was a writer by profession and was in the habit of thinking of the most wonderful plots and the wittiest conversations for his characters just as he dropped off to sleep, none of which he could remember the next morning, always used to argue with me that the ideas really were wonderful, and if he could only have a stenographer handy to take them down, he could surely have every magazine in the country eager for his stories.

Incidentally, this person has since married a stenographer, so I suppose we may expect some wonderful productions from his pen in the near future.

Coleridge, as you will remember, brought that beautiful fragment, Kubla Khan, back from dreamland with him. Who knows but that dreams and their twin sisters, the borderland inspirations, may not be a wonderful, full, undeveloped source of power and efficiency which the psychologist shall some day teach us to utilize? Isn't this an opportunity for the efficiency engineer to join forces with the psychologist and find some way by which we can crystallize these brilliant ideas, so that they will stand the strain of morning light without disappearing?

Or, are they like those beautiful little dew-dampened cobwebs that the summer night lays on the grass—in the days of long ago I used to pretend that these were jewel-encrusted scarfs which the fairies wore in the intervals of the dance, and sometimes hid behind in their haste when they fled at dawn—were these borderland inspirations, I say, as incapable of retaining their form and beauty under the sunlight as the fairies' scarfs?

You see I am back again to my original question. It is a maze from which I cannot seem to escape unless some wise friend can give me the clue that will lead—unlike poor Rosamond's—to the light of day.

"Now what on earth does all this mean?" I can hear some practical person exclaiming. "There must have been something the matter with Ruth when she wrote that."

Cheer up, my friend, it may not please you, but I know there will be some foolish dreamer like myself, who will know what I am trying to say. You see, I was just trying to put some of those borderland thoughts on paper. And tomorrow, I promise you, I shall be as practical as you please.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.

Moths are Getting Crazier Now. Simple Weapons of Warfare.

By Alice E. Whitaker.

The first moth greeted me today and gave warning that the spring cleaning must begin with strong smelling stuff and closely tied bags and perfectly sealed boxes. A few fortunate women can send away their furs, fine blouses and heavy winter clothes to be cared for by professionals, but most housekeepers must depend on their own vigilance to save their possessions from destruction.

It is entirely false to say a piece of fur or wool will be safe if tightly sealed in some impenetrable case. It is of little use to put camphor or moth balls among clothing when it is packed away if along with it goes a colony of moths.

Moths dislike strong pungent odors and on this quality the various exterminators depend. Clothing that is clean is less likely to be attacked than soiled articles therefore pieces like sweaters, knitted gloves, mittens or

The felt used in various places in the inside of a piano is a tempting feast to the moth and it sometimes happens that an unprotected piano is ruined during the summer in a closed house.

If examined many pianos would be found more or less moth eaten and the tone and action injured accordingly. One piano tuner told me to hang little bags filled with gum camphor in the inside of the piano case, another advised using moth balls in the same way while a third recommended ground cloves because this does not evaporate or lose strength of scent easily.

So little upholstered furniture is now used that this form of worry is almost eliminated. If there is a place or two of the old fashioned tufted port in the house it can be cleaned well by the vacuum method which will take out the dust and any pest secreted there. Most of the upholstered furniture of a late make is covered smoothly and is not so hard to keep clean.

The floor of closets and cupboards should be washed with soap and water and afterwards with water in which a spoonful of turpentine is added. This will destroy anything that is trying to hide in cracks and crevices.

Articles that are a natural prey to moths and that cannot be put away should be shaken up and sunned occasionally. At least stirring and beating are unpleasant to the moth and sometimes things are safer to be used than to be stored away unless the storing is perfectly done.

The Kitchen Cabinet

THERE are two stones we may not dare to cast: The stone of stumbling in our brother's way. The stone of judgment at our brother's feet. We, who ourselves like sheep have gone astray.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

During the extremely cold weather if the clothes pins are put into a dripping pan and heated hot, the hanging out of the clothes will be made much more comfortable. Do not carry out a full basket, or all the pins. A second trip will more than pay by the comfort.

Always wrap linen that is to lay any length of time, in blue paper. It will keep it from turning yellow.

Hair brushes, if carefully washed in hot soda water and quickly dried, will keep their freshness for years.

A good housekeeper says if we will stir a tablespoonful of vinegar into the lard in which fritters, doughnuts or potatoes are fried, they will not soak fat.

A teaspoonful of salt or a small piece of gum camphor added to the oil in a lamp is said to improve the light, always providing the burner is kept clean.

To lessen the labor of ironing table linens, if they are wrung by hand the wrinkles are not so firmly set and will dry smooth.

Eat apples. They are a tonic and an appetizer. They are rich in flavors and a valuable food adjunct.

If one would have a good complexion, it is necessary to have plenty of fresh air while sleeping and plenty of work to keep the mind busy. The only wrinkles then will be those made from laughter, and these are considered beautiful.

Winter or summer one window in the sleeping room should be kept open, day and night.

One person can exhaust all the air in an ordinary bedroom in an hour. A well-ventilated bedroom and the sleeper's head entirely covered with the bedclothes is no better than sleeping with a closed window.

MOST NOURISHMENT IN CHEAPER FOODS.

Dr. Rowntree, who has made a study of the causes of poverty, finds that nearly 60 per cent. of the expenditures for food by the poor was for animal food, while this amount furnished less than 40 per cent. of the total protein consumed. Sixty per cent. of the protein was furnished by 35 per cent. of the total expenditure, together with nearly 70 per cent. of the carbohydrate. The most important lesson that the poor need to learn in regard to food is, that it is not necessary to use flesh, eggs or sea food to be well nourished. For many years the writer has used none of these, while maintaining perfect health and working capacity, mental and physical.

If rugs are to be put away for the summer first clean them with a vacuum cleaner if possible, then roll up evenly and scatter moth balls or powders on the surface as the folding goes on.

Place the rugs on a cloth, like half of an old sheet, roll up tightly, tie the ends securely and either stand the rug up straight against the wall or lay it flat on the floor. Rugs put away in this careful manner or else left flat on the floor in their usual places are in much less danger than when they are folded away in closets to be undisturbed.

THE MEN AND WOMEN

Who Enjoy the Choicest Products of the World's Commerce.

Knowledge of What is Best More Important Than Wealth Without It.

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern commerce to attain to universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide prominence unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting and enjoying the choicest products. Their commendation, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the methods of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent of its kind. After thirty years of general usage, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is everywhere accepted as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the laxative and carminative principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup Co., which ensures that uniformity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. It cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects. To get the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, buy of your druggist the genuine only, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package; one size only, price, 50 cents per bottle.

IS GOLD BRICK TO BE FOUND IN BILL?

PARCELS POST RIDER DOES NOT HELP THE FARMERS AT ALL.

HAVE BEEN DELUDED

Will be of Great Benefit to The Mail Order Houses Throughout Country.

Washington, D. C., March 12.—The House Postoffice committee has ordered printed a bill attached as a rider to the Postoffice Appropriation bill which provides for a system of parcels post. Much has been said about the benefit such a system would be to farmers in sending products to towns. It would appear that the farmers have been handed a beautifully designed "gold-brick." The rural route rates do not apply to products sent from farmers to the towns. They are only available for the shipment from a person on one rural route to a person on the same route or from the starting point of such route.

Representatives of retail mail-order houses have been anxious to obtain a delivery system to people living along rural routes. Thus they would be able to ship their goods by freight or express in quantity to an agent in town and all such agent or collector will have to do will be to deposit these in a postoffice and to package them up to eleven pounds in weight at low rates, an eleven-pound package costing them only 25 cents. But if a farmer wishes to send an eleven-pound package to town or to a farmer on another route such package would cost him $1.32. Representatives of large retail mail-order houses have been active in Washington and it seems they have gotten very much of what they wanted from the House committee.

The committee also attempts to compel the Senators to abandon any convictions they may have upon the subject by attaching the bill as a rider to an appropriation bill. It also proposes to avoid criticism by shutting off debate with a closure rule. Members of the committee have said they did not aim to alarm or injure any legitimate business interest; but they have decided to condemn the merchants of the smaller cities and towns by instituting also a flat-rate system with a haul any distance in American territory at 12 cents per pound for a package up to eleven pounds in weight.

The bill says something about a commission to investigate conditions abroad. The country merchant is condemned to undergo a course of blood-transfusion for the benefit of the retail mail-order houses of the big cities. Then a commission will investigate abroad, while the blood letting operation is proceeding, to see how similar operations have affected conditions in the smaller cities and towns of Europe.

It would appear that the majority of Democrats upon the Committee have decided to become protectionists and protect distant concerns by getting the Government to equalize from its treasury the difference in the railway cost of a haul of several hundred miles and that of a few miles, for the benefit of the distant shipper against the representative's own home industry or dealer. Some of them seem to have forgotten they were elected to represent certain districts and not Chicago, New York or Boston.

The bill provides: "That each such and all rural mail delivery routes of the United States, until June 30, 1914, the postmaster at each starting point of such route shall receive and deliver to the carrier or carriers of said routes all articles, parcels or packages not prohibited to the mails by law and falling under the definition of fourth-class matter, and not weighing in excess of eleven pounds for transportation and delivery on said routes; and the carrier shall receive at intermediate points on all rural routes such mail matter of the fourth-class for delivery on their respective routes only."

"Postage shall be paid on all articles, parcels, or packages entitled to transportation under the provision of this act as matter of the fourth-class on rural mail delivery routes only at the following rates: One cent for each two ounces or less; 2 cents for more than two ounces, but not more than four ounces; 3 cents for more than four ounces, but not more than eight ounces; 4 cents for more than eight ounces, but not more than twelve ounces; 5 cents for more than twelve ounces, but not more than a pound; 6 cents per pound for each additional pound or fraction thereof up to and including a total of eleven pounds." This would make the maximum charges for a parcel over the rural route 25 cents.

No provision is made to furnish this service to farmers who have not received rural free delivery nor to furnish any carrier service to people in towns yet without it. It is believed that the service can be instituted at an initial expense of probably $75,000,000 and a yearly deficit of probably $150,000,000. It is generally admitted that the express companies will strive for the profitable short hauls and leave the government the losing long hauls. Antitrust laws must not prevent the Government from operating and owning express companies and operating the railroads. The excuse of some committee members is that a Republican administration has lowered some rates to foreigners through "postal conventions." An army of Federal employees will be added under General Hitchcock's direction.

President Taft in a message to Congress February 22, said: "I believe that the true principle is that private enterprise should be permitted to carry on such public utilities under due regulation as to rates by proper authority rather than that the government should conduct them. This principle I favor because I do not think it in accordance with the best policy to have the government take some time to perfect these additional to the activities of the Postoffice Department and we may well allow their complete and successful operation before we take on a new burden at this very crowded season."

In the above, it might seem that the President referred to extending the rural free delivery to the half of the farmers who do not yet have it and a carrier service to the people of towns not without the same, before adding parcels post. But he referred to Government ownership and operation of telegraphs advocated by the Postmaster General. Like the Postmaster General, evidently anticipating a huge deficit therefrom, he advocates doubling the present rates upon newspapers and periodicals. The Postmaster General recommended that the time he quadrupled, but the President's recommendation is in accordance with the recommendation of the commission appointed to investigate the subject. He said nothing in this message about the appointment of a commission to first investigate the effects of the parcels post systems abroad, as he did in an earlier message. He says "It is not just that some classes of mail should be exorbitantly taxed to meet a deficiency caused by other classes, the revenue from which is much below the cost of handling and carriage." However, neither the President nor Mr. Hitchcock advocated reduction of letter postage, the revenue from which is now supporting the rural delivery system. He adds: "It is carefully estimated by the Postoffice Department that the revenue derived from matter of the first-class is approximately one and a half times the cost of handling and carriage; that the returns from third and fourth-class matter are slightly in excess of their cost of handling and carriage."

The President in his message says nothing about the fact that farmers who do not live upon rural routes will have to pay part of the expense of corporation of an express-carrying system upon routes now established and that, as farmers cannot avail themselves of the rural rates in sending products to the towns, those who are loyal to their own communities will have to pay part of the expenses of those who want this service that they may patronize the retail mail-order houses.

Mr. S. Norvall of St. Louis recently returned from a tour of parcels post countries in Europe. He gave the Senate Postoffice Committee a report of his investigations. In part he said: "The well-to-do people bought their supplies of all kinds direct from London, Paris and Berlin either by mail or by personal visits. On a purchase of $5.00 or over, it is the custom of these department stores or mail order houses to deliver all goods. The small dealers simply had to content himself with the business he could pick up from laboring men and others who were too poor to buy away from home. All said parcels post was responsible for this condition."

Mr. Norvall explained that monarchic countries found it to their interest to favor centralization of trade, industry and resources through parcels post; that Americans who had amassed a competence under conditions which they never could have done under European conditions were attracted abroad by the cheapness of service, not considering that employees were paid less than half what they received in America. He said that, if we attempt to imitate the cheap service of European countries of dense populations and short hauls through parcels post and pay our railroads for their service according to the scale of their operating expenditures, the postal deficit would be multiplied amazingly and this must be supplied by taxation of our people in some form. The average haul in England, he said, is 41 miles; in the United States for merchandise 687 miles. Mr. Norvall said that international postal agreements made not by Congress but by the Postoffice Department, constituted the great argument for extending rates made as international treaties.

Senator Kern read in the Senate Feb. 22 and in the following: "Why forego all the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by standing upon foreign ground with that of intervening our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, honor or caprice?" "Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course."

"The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power by dividing and distributing it into different centers and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasion by the others, has been evolved by experience into a modern and necessary principle of government. Let there be no change or usurpation; let there be no change of power, for although this in one instance may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which government is destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil the partial or transient benefit which the use can at the time yield."

"Foreign influence is one of the most harmful foes of republican government. The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is to extend our commercial relations to have with them as little political connection as possible."

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Paid Advertisement; amount paid for each insertion, $1.25.

At the request of many friends I have decided to announce myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor at the primary election to be held March 19, 1912.

It is due the voters and tax payers to know what I stand for, and what I will attempt to aid in accomplishing if elected.

First, I believe in a conservative, economical business administration where every dollar expended represents a dollar in value.

Second, I believe in the impartial enforcement of law without fear or favor and that no line of business should be exempt.

Third, I believe that the number of saloons in Janesville makes it necessary for the men engaged in the business to resort to all sorts of devices to make a living. The number should be reduced and the men that are licensed should understand that offences will not be tolerated. Obey the law or forfeit the license.

Fourth, the city is polluted with dives and gambling houses, with slot machines and other devices which ruin our boys and young men. These conditions should not exist and they need not.

I believe that my experiences for the past 35 years with men and affairs, qualify me to render the city, which has long been my home, efficient service. I ask your support at the polls. JOHN W. PETERS.

Steady and consistent advertising is what makes business grow.

CUTICURA OINTMENT HEALED BAD SORE

Scraped Flesh Off Bone Below Knee.
Suffered So She Couldn't Sleep.
Also Says: "I Believe Cuticura Soap is the Best Soap Made."

"Some time ago I was coming up some steps when the board cracked under me like an egg shell, and my right leg went through and the flesh off the bone just below the knee. I expected it for a day or two, then it began to hurt me very badly. I put balsam on it to draw out the poison, but when I had used it a week, it hurt so badly that I changed to ointment. This made it smart and burn so badly that I couldn't use it any more, and that was the fourth week after I was hurt. Then I began to use Cuticura Ointment for the sore. It stopped the smarting and began healing right away. It was a bad-looking sore before Cuticura Ointment healed it, and I suffered so I couldn't sleep from two days after I fell until I began using Cuticura Ointment. In the best soap I ever saw. I have used all kinds of soap for washing my face, and always it would leave my face smarting. I had to keep a lotion to stop the smart, no matter how expensive. I used Cuticura Soap. It was the best soap I ever used. It will clean my face and leave no smarting, and I do not have to use any lotion or anything else to ease it. I believe Cuticura Soap is the best soap made." ## THE WAY OF A MAN

By EMERSON HOUGH

Copyright, 1911, by the Oatling Publishing Company

"Here, you," called out Mandy McGovern, "get hold of the end of this rope."

She tossed to me the end of the gang-plank rope, by which the sliding stage was drawn out and in at the boat landings. I caught this and passed it over a projection on the snag.

The gangplank, confined by the rope, swung in the current alongside the wharf, but it seemed useless to undertake to restore it to its position. The girl covered against the side of the dock opening. "Wait," I called to her, and, slipping down into the water again, I waded as close as I could to the door, the water then catching me close to the shoulders.

"Jump!" I ordered, holding out my arms.

"I can't, I'm afraid," she said. "Do as I tell you!" I roared. "Jump at once!" As I caught her slight with my arms under hers she was for the moment almost immersed, but I staggered backward and managed to hold my footing till Auberry's arms reached us from the snag, up which we clambered, the girl dripping wet and catching her breath in terror.

We had traveled perhaps three-quarters of a mile when I noticed the dim loom of trees on our side of the stream and saw that we were approaching a long point which ran out below us. This should have been the deep side of the river, but no one can account for the vagaries of the Missouri. When we were within a hundred yards or so of the point we felt a long shuddering scrape under us, and after a series of slips and jerks our old snags came to anchor again, its roots having once more held hold upon a bar. It occurred to me that as I had been able to touch bottom on the other bar I might do so here. I crawled back along the trunk of the snag to a place as near the roots as I could reach and, letting myself down gently, found that I could keep my footing on the sand.

Little by little I edged up the stream and found that the water shoaled toward the head of driftwood. It dropped off, I knew not how deep, between the edge of the bar and the piled drift, but, standing up more than waist deep, I could reach the outer limbs of the drift and saw that they would support my weight. After that I waded back to the snag carefully and once more ordered the young woman to come to me.

She came back along the naked and slippery trunk of the snag, pulling herself along by her hands, her bare feet and limbs deep in the water alongside. I could hear the sob of her intaken breath and saw that she trembled in fright, and more dead than alive, it seemed to me, she fell once more into my arms. I felt her grasp tighten about my neck and her firm body crowd against me as we both sank down for an instant. Then I caught my feet and straightened and was really the stender for the added weight, as any one knows who has waded in fast water.

"Get up, Auberry," I said to him as he approached and motioned to the long, overhanging branches from the driftwood. He swung up, breaking off the more luxuriant boughs, and was of the belief that we could get across in that way. As he reached down, I swung the young woman up to him, and she clambered on as best she could. Thus, I scarce know how, we all managed to reach the solid drift and so presently found ourselves ashore on a narrow sandy beach hedged on the back by a heavy growth of willows.

"Now then, you men," ordered Mandy McGovern, "get some wood out and start a fire right away. This here girl is shivering the both plumb out'n her bones." Mandy drew forth two sticks, each stapped with a bit of corn-cob. The one held sulphur matches, thus kept quite dry, and this she passed to me. The other she handed to the young woman.

"Here," said she, "take a drink of that. I'll do you good."

I heard the girl gasp and choke as she obeyed this injunction, and then Mandy applied the bottle gurglingly to her own lips.

Presently we had a roaring blaze started, and Mandy, seating herself comfortably upon a log and producing a corn-cob pipe and a quantity of natural leaf tobacco, proceeded to enjoy herself in her own fashion. "This here's all right," she remarked. "We ought to be a heap worse off'n we air."

I could not help pitying the young woman who crouched near her at the fireside, still shivering. She seemed so young and helpless and so out of place in such surroundings. The freight showed in silhouette the outlines of her face. It seemed to me I had never seen one more beautiful. Perhaps she felt my gaze, for presently she turned and said: "Indeed it might be worse. I thank you so much. It was very brave of you."

We had waited perhaps not over an hour, undecided what to do, when Auberry raised a hand. "Listen," he said. "There's a boat coming," and presently we all heard the splash of oars. Our fire had been seen by one of the boats of the River Belle, out picking up such stragglers as could be found. So our little bivouac on the beach came to an end.

I did not get the name of the girl I had seen there in the freight. What did remain—and that not wholly to my pleasure, so distinct it seemed—was the picture of her high bred profile, shown in silhouette at the fireside, the hue of her chin and neck, the tumbled masses of her hair. These were things I did not care to remember, and I hated myself as a soft hearted fool, seeing that I did so.

"Son," said old Auberry to me after a thing as we trudged along up the bank, stumbling over roots and braided grasses, "that was a mighty fine look in' gal we bring along with us there."

"I didn't notice," said I.

"No," said Auberry solemnly. "I doctored you didn't take no notice."

"I suppose you're married," I suggested.

"Some," said Auberry, chuckling. "In fact, a good deal, I reckon. My present woman's a Shoshone—she's livin' up Horse creek, below Laramie. Them Shoshones make about the best dressers of 'em all."

"I don't quite understand."

"I mean hides. They can make the best buckskin of any tribe I know." He walked on ahead in the dark for some time before he added tolerantly, "Well, after all, in some ways women be women, my son, and men be men, that beat the way this world is made just at these here present times. As I was sayin', that's a powerful nice lookin' gal."

It seemed to me that I saw glancing down directly at me one cold, bright, reproving star, staring straight into my soul and accusing me of being nothing more than a savage, nothing better than a man.

CHAPTER VIII.
Her Infinite Variety.

AT our little village on the following morning Auberry and I learned that the River Belle would lie up indefinitely for repairs and that at least one, perhaps several days would elapse before she resumed her journey up stream. Our plans were changed again, for a young army officer came down from that post with the information that Colonel Meriwether had been ordered out to the posts up the Platte river, and been gone for three weeks, and no one could tell what time he would return. The Indians were reported very bad along the Platte. Possibly Colonel Meriwether might be back at Leavenworth within the week, possibly not for a month or more. This was desperate news for me, for I knew that I ought to be starting home at that very time. I wrote home once more, stating that I was not starting east, but going still farther west.

Auberry, as it chanced, fell in with a party bound for Denver, five men who had two wagons, a heavy Conestoga freight wagon or prairie schooner, and a lighter vehicle without a cover. We arranged with these men and their cook as to our share in the mess and so threw in our baggage with theirs. Auberry and I purchasing us a good horse apiece. By noon of the next day we were on our way westward.

At last we approached the valley of the Platte. We were coming now indeed into the great plains, of which I had heard all my youth. A new atmosphere seemed to invest the world. The talk of my companions was of things new and wild and strange to me. All my old life seemed to be slipping back of me, into a far off-dimension. Many things became more clear to me as I rode and reflected. In some way, I know not how, it seemed to me that I was growing older.

We had been out more than two weeks when finally we reached the great valley along which lay the western highway of the old Oregon trail, now worn deep and dusty by countless wheels. We pushed up the main trail of the Platte but a short distance that night.

We looked forward to meeting human faces with some pleasure. But an hour or so later as we rode on I saw Auberry pull up his horse, with a strange tightening of his lips. "Boys," said he, "there's where it was." His pointing finger showed nothing more than a low line of ruins, bits of broken fencing, a heap of half charred timbers.

"They've been here," said Auberry grimly. "Who'd have thought the Sioux would be this far east?"

We rode up to the station, guessing what we would see. Five dead horses lay near by, a part of the stage stock kept there. We kept our eyes as long as we could from the bodies of the night and his two stallions, mutilated and half consumed, under the burned out timbers. I saw the bodies, for the lower limbs of all three had been dismembered and cast in a heap near where the bodies of the horses lay.

The third day passed until the sun sank toward the sand-dunes and cast a long path of light across the rippling shadows among the sand bars of the Platte. But still we saw no signs of newcomers. Evening was approaching when we heard the sound of a distant shot and saw our horse guard running toward the camp. As he approached he pointed, and we saw a faint cloud of dust coming toward us. The travelers were horsemen, perhaps thirty or forty in all. Following them came the dust whiffed top of an army ambulance and several camp wagons. We hesitated no longer and quickly mounting our horses rode full speed toward them.

They were a seasoned lot of Harney's frontier fighters, grimed and grizzled, their hats, boots and clothing gray with dust, but their weapons bright. Their leader approached us when I rode up.

"Lieutenant Belknap," I exclaimed. "Do you remember meeting me down at Jefferson?"

"Why, Mr. Cowles, how on earth did you get here? Of course I remember you."

"Yes, but how did you get here yourself? You were not on my boat."

"Orders to take this detachment out to Laramie," he said, "and meet Colonel Meriwether there."

"If I'm not back? I was hoping to meet him coming east."

"No," said Belknap. "You'll have to go on with us if you wish to see him. I'm afraid the Sioux are bad, on the Platte." He turned toward the ambulance, and I glanced that way. There stood near it a tall, angular figure, head enshrouded in an enormous sunbonnet.

"Why, that's my friend, Mandy McGovern," said I.

At that moment, descending at the rear of the ambulance, I saw the other one.

It was a young woman who left the step of the ambulance and stood for a moment shading her eyes with her hand and looking out over the shimmering expanse of the broad river. All at once the entire landscape was changed. It was not the desert, but civilization, which swept about us. A transformation had been wrought by one figure, fair to look upon. The swift verity of my soul was upon the point of calling this as fine a figure of young womanhood as I had ever seen.

I was about to ask some questions of Belknap when all at once I saw nothing that utterly changed my pleasant frame of mind. The tall figure of a man came from beyond the line of wagons—a man and in well fitting tweeds cut for riding. I imagine it was the same swift male journey that affected both Belknap and myself as we saw Gordon Orme.

"Yes; there is your friend, the Englishman," said Belknap rather bitterly. "I meet him everywhere." I answered, "The thing is simply amazing. What is he doing out here?"

"We are taking him out to Laramie with us. He has letters to Colonel Meriwether, it seems. Cowles, what do you know about that man?"

"Nothing," said I, "except that he purports to come from the English army."

"He's prowling about every military post he can get into."

"With a special reference to army officers born in the south?" I looked at Belknap in the eye.

"There's something in that," he replied. "I don't like the look of it. These are good times for every man to attend to his own business."

A moment later I saw across my former friend, Mandy McGovern, in her surprise she stopped chewing tobacco.

"Well, I declare to gracious," she began, "if here ain't the man I met on the boat! How'd you get away out here ahead of us? Have you any dry butter? I'm gettin' plumb wuth'er fer something to shoot at."

"What I was doing at that precise moment, as I must confess, was taking a half unconscious look once more toward the tail of the ambulance, where Orme and the young woman stood chatting. But it was at this time that Orme came forward.

Splendid, but Unromantic.

England is still the land of splendid houses, especially of the middle class, where ordinary, clean-living, level-headed English men and women are rearing families of healthy boys and girls and instilling into their minds good, honest principles of right and wrong. The popular novelist does not add these people interesting—London Gentlewoman.

A Hard-Luck Story.

"Politeness always pays." "I don't know about that," replied Mr. Hunting Work, "I had a pretty good position as a bill collector. But I made myself so agreeable that people held out on payments for fear I'd stop calling on them."

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

THE CRADLE OF LIBERTY.

By A. W. MACY.

The Fanell family of Boston loved liberty. Their ancestors had fled from the Huguenot persecution in France, and they appreciated the blessings of freedom. They were well-to-do, and it is said that when one of them died in 1738 three thousand pairs of mourning gloves were provided for the attendants at the funeral. In 1742 Peter Fanell built a house and gave it to the city of Boston. His main purpose was to provide a public market place, and to this the ground floor was devoted. The upper room was fitted up as a hall for public gatherings. The Sons of Liberty met here during the incipient stages of the Revolution, and from this fact the building became known as "the cradle of liberty." It burned down in 1761, some years after the doctor's death, but it was immediately rebuilt by the city. In 1805 it was enlarged by the addition of another story and by making it forty feet wider. As this rebuilt the structure remained substantially the same until 1899, when more changes were made. The market facilities have been greatly extended, and now occupy a whole square.

THE DOCTOR'S QUESTION.

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98% of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver, and that this condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Regular Orderlies are a positive, pleasant, and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Boxall Orderlies are eaten like candy they act quickly, and aid in producing a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, grip, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea, or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons, or old folks. Three sizes, 10c, 25c, and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Boxall Store, The Smith Drug Co., 14 West Milwaukee St., Jamesville, Wis.

DELICATE CHILDREN

Made Strong by Vinol

"I wish I could induce every mother who has a delicate, sickly child, to try our delicious cod liver oil tonic, Vinol."

It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed. It tastes so good she loved to take it—not a bit of cod liver oil taste.—Mrs. C. W. Stump, Canton, Ohio.

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up puny, delicate, ailing children, is because it is a combination of the two most world-famed tonics—the medicinal body-building elements of cod liver oil, added by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength-creator for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand. Smith Drug Co., Jamesville, Wis.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health. Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regarding the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Salem St., Montpelier, Vt., says:

"I was afflicted with constipation and biliousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found that I never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

I'll Look in the Gazette

This is the first impulse of the average person who finds a lost article in Jamesville.

The finder knows from past experience that he's pretty sure to find the "Lost" ad of the owner in "The Gazette."

The loser knows that "The Gazette" is the best medium through which to find the finder.

Gazette "Want" Ads are common ground. There's no dispute about their being the best way to get back a "Lost."

CHILDREN OF LAWRENCE STRIKERS
CHILDREN OF LAWRENCE STRIKERS ON PARADE.

New York City.—The spectacular feature of the attempt to secure suitable homes for children of the Lawrence, Mass., strikers was the formation of a parade headed by a brass band up Fifth avenue in which the little unfortunate participated carrying strongly worded banners. The parade excited much comment and assisted materially in furthering the philanthropic work of those interested in securing homes for children.

VALET CASE
New York City.—After being in prison for nearly five years, Pauline Brandt, charged with burglary at the house of Mortimer L. Schiff, where he was formerly employed as valet, stands on the verge of freedom. In spite of statements to the contrary, Governor Dix may extend clemency for Brandt. Attorney General Cummings told the governor over the long-distance telephone that the people were demanding justice for Brandt, and that none but he could give it. Judge Otto A. Rosalesky, who sentenced Brandt to thirty-five years in prison, defended his own action, declaring that his action on the bench would bear the closest scrutiny. He has been made, however, by bitter attack, to add a full and complete investigation into the whole matter. The attitude of Mr. Schiff, as presented by Alton B. Parker, is in part as follows: "There has never been a time since this man's conviction that Mr. Schiff would not have injected himself into an application for clemency based upon grounds of contrition and reformation. Instead of that, according to the reports, Brandt attempted to gain the sympathy of the governor and other officials by posing as a martyr to SKELETON. Under the infamous suggestion that Brandt's presence in my client's house was to keep an appointment with one dealer than life itself. "With an instinct natural to husbands or fathers, my client has felt like resisting the call of civic duty which demanded exposure of charges so vile and outrageous—but he resists no longer. He hopes now for a trial that will enable the public to judge of the prisoner's crime and afford him the opportunity of vindicating his honor and that of his loved wife."

At The Theatre

"THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE."
"What a wonderful lesson is being taught by this still more wonderful play at the Savoy," wrote the critic of Club Life during the run of "The Servant in the House" in New York. "Daring indeed is Mr. Kennedy, but how true to life it all is. 'God isn't looking—let us give an little and grab as much as we can,' just seems to fit the average man, whether he be a clergyman or business man. And looking over the well-fed audience that filled the Savoy, I fancy it must have gone as straight as an arrow to at least one-half of the men there. It was, however, a bit rough on the bishop to be exposed and before one of the people, too. It is as perfect a performance as one can ever hope to see; a play that requires intelligent people to interpret it. It is life—real life—we all live it if we but stop to think a bit. How we walk over the bodies and bones of our fellow beings to gain for ourselves what we most desire, but we do not stop to think, lest conscience creep in and make us a bit uncomfortable. There is about the finest bit of acting in this play that New York has ever seen or may hope to see."

"THE SPRING MAID."
Every woman finds cause for special interest in "The Spring Maid," the splendid new Viennese operetta, in addition to the joy of its melodies and story of romance, for a new shade of coloring has been found so dainty and of such a blend that every feminine mind pictures it in her new gowns and hats. So unusual has it been found for all its pastel effect is so quiet, that even the masculine eye as represented by the critics of Metropolitan newspapers, have been loath to let their reviews of the operetta end without a commendation of the color scheme. Unlike most new colorings for which artists strive in secret for months, "The Spring Maid" pastel green is the result of a lucky accident. A boy apprentice fooling with the notes of colors in the paint shop in which the great scenery sets of "The Spring Maid" were being decorated, made daubs upon a partially painted background of foliage, and a tint resulted which suggested the most delicate greens of the earliest forest coloring. It caught the master artist's eye, and his admiration for it led to the spreading of the scenery anew with a tinting that no theatrical production has had before. But the result made troubles. The gorgeous costumes already arranged must be altered, parts must be dyed, and the wildest scurry was necessary to match the costumes to the scenery in time for the announced opening of the opera. It was then that the members of the firm of Voss and Lawrence proved their capability as shoppers, and finally, after rainbow-clashing through a dozen cities, a little and almost forgotten store in Philadelphia, representing a little stock of silk stockings, ribbons and feminine flattery that matched the sample dab of paint the shoppers were carrying about on a bit of cardboard. "That was months ago. Today, after the success "The Spring Maid" has had, a dozen wholesalers in New York announce the delicate "Spring Maid" shades, but the troubles of color matching have never been outgrown in the minds of "The Spring Maid" leading women, and the quaint little store on the ancient side street has taken on new activity and sends its springlike greens to the hurrying Spring Maid, however far she may roam across America.

WELL DESERVED RECOGNITION.
The official acknowledgment of the Lyman H. Howe Travel Festival as a mighty influence for public good was the honor again conferred upon Lyman H. Howe during the greatest annual review in American history. Several years ago the educational value of his exhibition was recognized by the highest government officials to such an extent that they considered it advantageous to give him privileges to photograph many events of great national interest. Mr. Howe's photographers, at that time, demonstrated their ability so well that during the naval review in New York harbor last November they were allowed to place their cameras at any point of vantage they chose. The importance of presenting to citizens authentic and intimate scenes showing the magnitude of our navy and the efficiency of men, guns and machinery prompted the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. von L. Meyer, to permit Mr. Howe's camera men to accompany him on the U. S. Dolphin as the official photographers of every phase of the review. It was the most magnificent exhibition of the fighting forces of a country ever attempted. It will be vividly reproduced at the Myers Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday on March 26 and 27, matinee 27. It inspires thrills of patriotism and national pride and conveys information which should be known by every American citizen. A series which depicts the classic beauty of Italy, the land of history and romance; the wonders of the Grand Canyon, Colorado; the newest mode of locomotion through water and air by means of the aeroplane, and the daring maneuvers of Italian aviators are among the many other subjects in Mr. Howe's gallery of masterpieces in motion photography.
